ABSTRACT

The reference guide presents a model for career education in Michigan and clarifies the content of career development by specifying student outcomes. The document organizes the content of career development into four basic interrelated knowledge, skill, and attitude components: (1) self-awareness and assessment, focusing on helping individuals understand themselves and others; (2) career awareness and exploration, focusing on the interrelatedness of family, citizen, leisure and occupational roles, home, school, work and community settings, and various events such as job entry, marriage, and retirement; (3) career decision making, focusing on skills related to life/career planning; and (4) career planning and placement, focusing on acquiring prerequisite skills and knowledge which lead to life career goals. An organizational pattern for each component of career development is presented indicating two elements, 17 general goals, and 49 sub-goals. In addition another chart shows how each of the 49 sub-goals are restated as performance indicators for four developmental levels (K-3, 4-6, 7-9, and 10-adult). A brief discussion of the infusion process for teachers and counselors is also presented. (Author/BP)

Foreword

Educators from our state have requested additional information relating to the planning and implementation of career education in their schools.

The state department of education has supported career education in several local sites for the past four years. This support has resulted in extensive refinement of the concepts of career education and career development.

The following document presents a model for career education in Michigan and clarifies the content of career development by specifying student outcomes.

The book organizes the content of career development into the areas of self awareness, career exploration, decision making, planning and placement.

This document will serve as a reference guide for Michigan educators to use in planning career education curriculum.

The Career Development Goals and Performance Indicators presented in this document have undergone extensive review and revision and will be subjected to continued field testing and refinement. A survey form for your comments and suggestions is included at the end of this guide. Please complete and return the forms which appear on pages 68 and 69.

Introduction

Career Education is the delivering of skills to all students which will provide them with the ability to explore, understand, and perform in their life roles while learning, working, and living.

In this statement, the Michigan Career Education Advisory Commission¹ is expanding the definition of "career" to include the individual's life roles as citizen, family member, and participant in aesthetic and recreational experiences, as well as worker. Using this broader definition of the word career gives career education sufficient scope so that it embraces all elements of the Common Goals of Michigan Education. The goals stress the individuals acquisition of basic skills, preparation for social participation and change, ability to think creatively and critically, development of a strong self-concept, and the gaining of occupational skills.

All elements of education have a role to play in Career Education. In addition, the implementation of Career Education requires the participation of the school and the total community in a cooperative relationship.

The various segments of Career Education generally separate into two broad categories; those being Career Development, and Career Preparation.

Career Development is that part of Career Education which includes: Self Awareness and Assessment, Career Awareness and Exploration, Career Decision Making, and Career Planning and Placement.

Career Preparation is the acquiring of academic and vocational knowledge and skills necessary to implement career decisions and plans.

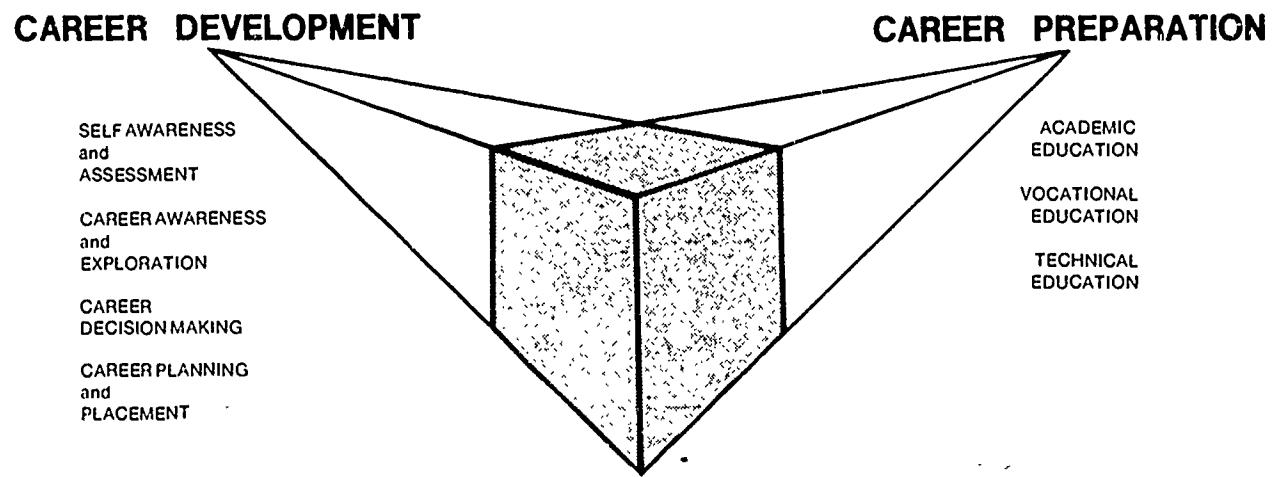

A first step in establishing a career education program requires an analysis of the career development concept. The results of this analysis are statements of student outcomes for career development.

These student outcomes and an organizing framework for them are presented in this reference guide.

Many educators are already incorporating career development concepts into their programs. This document can be used by these educators to identify other concepts and areas they want to incorporate or it can be used to give educators not familiar with the concept an understanding of Career Education and an opportunity for involvement.

CAREER EDUCATION

AN INTEGRATED APPROACH

FIGURE I

The Career Development Concept

The Michigan model for career development identifies four basic interrelated knowledge, skill, and attitude components: Self Awareness and Assessment, Career Awareness and Exploration, Career Decision-Making, and Career Planning and Placement.

These four components of the conceptual model are presented in Figure 2.

As indicated, these components are completely interrelated as individuals develop throughout their lives.

The existence of discreet categories is possible only through arbitrary assignment of concepts to components and is useful for understanding career development and for organizing more specific outcome statements.

Self Awareness and Assessment

In the Self Awareness and Assessment component, the content and activities focus on helping individuals understand themselves and others.

The main concepts of this component involve individuals' awareness and acceptance of themselves, the awareness and acceptance of others, and the development of interpersonal skills.

Within this component, individuals begin to develop an awareness of their personal characteristics -- interests, aspiration, aptitudes, abilities, and values and the characteristics of others.

Individuals learn techniques for self appraisal and the analysis of their personal characteristics in terms of life-career options.

They begin to formulate plans for self improvement. Individuals become knowledgeable about the interactive relationship of individual and group roles in such a way that they develop personal standards and a sense of purpose in life.

Outcomes of this component reflect a person who can utilize self knowledge in life-career planning and in the fostering of positive interpersonal relations.

Individuals become self directed in that they accept responsibility for their own behavior.

Self Awareness and Assessment is a life-long process of discovering individuals traits, developing a personal profile, and understanding that these traits and profile are constantly changing.

Career Awareness and Exploration

The content and activities found in this component focus on the interrelatedness of family, citizen, leisure and occupational roles; home, school, work, and community settings; and the various events such as job entry, marriage, and retirement, which may occur during the life stages of individuals.

Emphasis is given to knowledge and understanding of the structure and dimensions of the education, work, family, citizen, and leisure worlds.

For example, individuals will learn that there are many occupations and industries which comprise the world of work and that these occupations and industries can be grouped in a number of ways.

Such groupings can serve as an avenue through which individuals learn of the similarities and differences among workers and work places.

Emphasis is placed on the individual's learning of selected associations among specific occupational requirements, personal characteristics, skills, interests, values, and aspirations.

The rapidity of social and technological change and other factors affecting the flux of the work force and the work situation are elements considered in this component.

The individual begins to view the basic dimensions of the worlds of education, work, family, citizen, and leisure from three perspectives -- sociological, psychological, and economic.

The sociological dimension encompasses such components as societal limitations on the individual's choice of occupation and the purposes of education, work, leisure, family development, and citizen involvement.

The economic component refers to such considerations of occupational choice as amount of pay, number of hours, fringe benefits, and the cost of various leisure, family, and citizen activities.

The psychological perspective refers to the amount and kind of personal satisfaction an individual receives from education, work, leisure, family, and citizen involvement, and the internal factors which affect this satisfaction.

As a result of learning about the interaction of these component parts of the worlds of education, work, family, citizen, and leisure, individuals learn of the reciprocal influences of specific activities and can analyze life style preferences.

Career Decision Making

The Career Decision-Making component contains content and activities designed to help individuals understand that decision-making is an important task in everyday life.

The central focus of this component is a mastery of decision-making skills related to life-career planning.

Individuals begin to develop skills in this area by identifying the elements of the decision-making process. These elements include gathering information from relevant sources, both external and internal, and learning to utilize the collected information in making informed, reasonable decisions.

Individuals begin to engage in planning activities and to understand that they can influence their future by applying such skill.

They begin to accept responsibility for making their own choices, for managing their own resources and for directing the future course of their own lives.

Other dimensions in this component include the concept of change, space, and time as they affect life-career planning.

Individuals learn of the potential impact of change in modern society and of the necessity of being able to project themselves into the future.

In this way, they can begin to predict the future and to foresee alternatives which they may choose and to plan to meet the requirements of preferred life-career alternatives.

The major educational goals within this component are directed toward facilitating the development of individuals who value decision making and can formulate reasonable life-career plans.

Career Planning and Placement

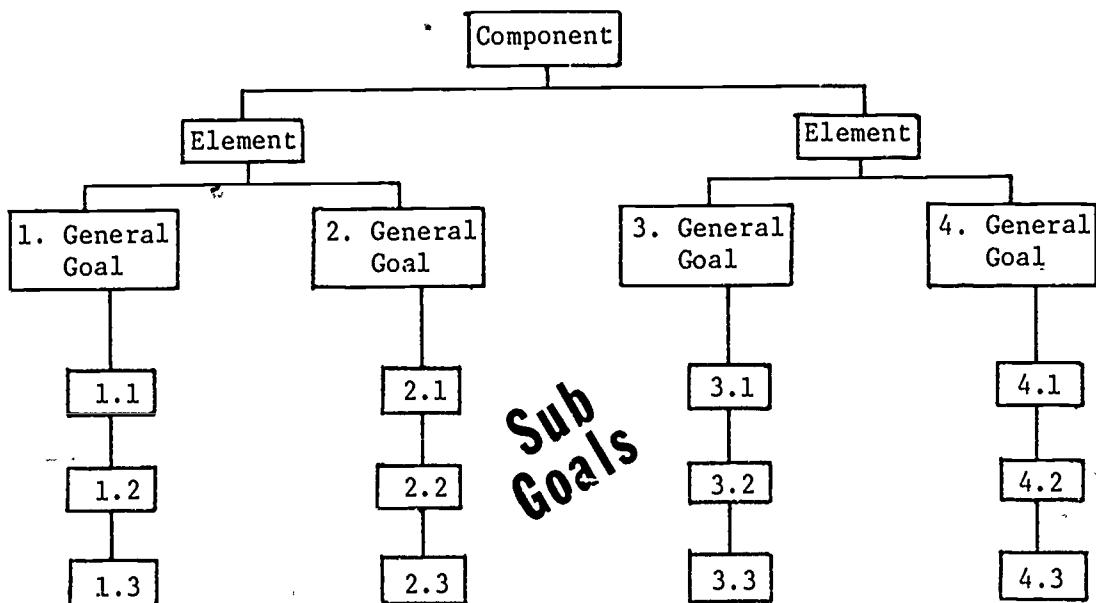

This component contains content and activities designed to help individuals develop and implement systematic programs to reach career goals.

The individual in this component sets out to acquire prerequisite skills and knowledge which lead to his or her life-career goals.

The individual identifies and uses appropriate resources to acquire these skills and knowledges, and consciously assesses progress toward life-career goals, making whatever adjustments are necessary to maintain progress toward meaningful life-career goals.

The individual, in this component, is demonstrating commitment to life-career plans and goals by taking action.

The Organizational Chart

An important challenge in developing a reference guide such as this is to present an organizational framework which is logical and meaningful.

The organizational pattern for breaking down each component of Career Development into its parts is presented above. This diagram indicates the interrelatedness of career development concepts.

As this organization chart indicates, each component is restated as two elements.

Each element is broken down into several numbered general goals. These goals, seventeen in all, represent very broad areas of career development attitudes, knowledge, and/or behaviors.

General goals are more specifically stated as sub goals.

Both the general goals and the sub goals are meant to be used by teachers and counselors at all grade levels.

CAREER DEVELOPMENT

Career Development Performance Indicators

This chart represents how each of the forty-nine sub goals presented in Figure 3 is restated as Performance Indicators.

The four developmental levels of performance indicators (K-3, 4-6, 7-9, 10-Adult) are specified only for purposes of clarity; they should not be interpreted as strict categories.

These performance indicators are expressed in terms of individual outcomes and are helpful in planning learning experiences. The teacher or counselor must use his or her judgment in determining which performance indicators would be appropriate for their situation.

As the conditions of a specific learning situation are known and as criteria are set, these performance indicators are easily restated as performance objectives.

The forty-nine sub goals and samples of appropriate performance indicators are stated in their entirety on pages 14 through 66 of this document.

The Infusion Process for Teachers and Counselors

One important use of this document will be to develop career education curriculum which infuses career development concepts into existing curriculum.

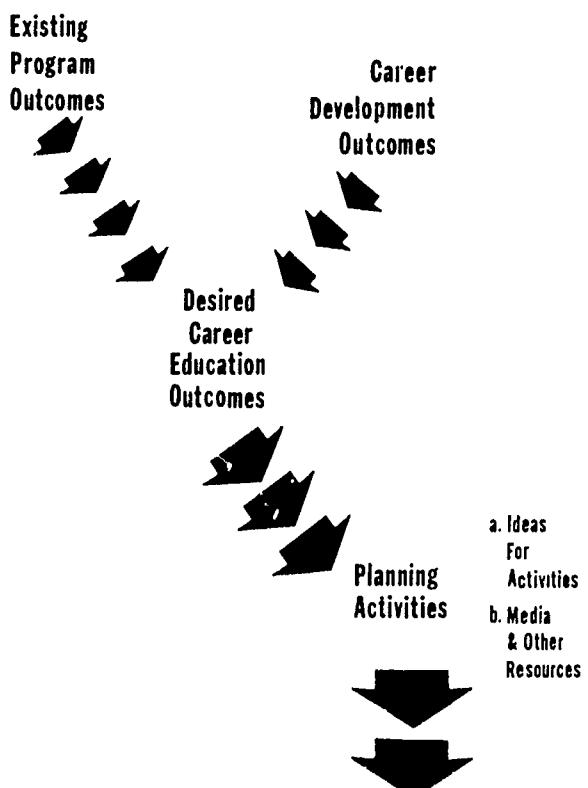

The infusion process is a series of steps a teacher or counselor can follow to identify where in existing instructional and guidance programs, they can assist students in reaching career development outcomes.

The first major step in the infusion process is to identify the desired outcomes for the lesson or guidance activity being developed. This reference guide serves as a resource of career development outcomes.

By combining selected career development outcomes with selected subject matter outcomes, a teacher establishes the basis for planning career education curriculum; likewise, counselors may infuse selected career development outcomes into existing counseling and guidance programs.

A second major step of the infusion process involves identifying the activities and resources a counselor or teacher may utilize to reach the desired outcomes. Additional resources such as a collection of ideas for activities, a guide of commercially produced materials, or a guide of community resources will aid in planning career education lessons or guidance activities.

Suggestions for using this Reference Guide and the infusion process are described in detail in the Infusion Handbooks² for teachers and counselors.

CAREER DEVELOPMENT

SUB GOALS

AND

PERFORMANCE INDICATORS

1.1 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO RECOGNIZE SIMILARITIES AND DIFFERENCES
BETWEEN HIS OR HER PHYSICAL, INTELLECTUAL AND EMOTIONAL CHARACTERISTICS AND THOSE OF OTHERS.

K-3

4-6 (incl. K-3)

7-9 (incl. K-6)

10-A (incl. K-9)

Performance Indicators

1.1 (A) For the individual to give (three) examples of his or her physical characteristics, and (two) examples of his or her intellectual characteristics.

1.1 (B) Given a situation (a new baby in the family), the individual can give examples of (two) different emotional reactions to that situation.

1.1 (C) For the individual to describe (three) motor skills he or she does well.

1.1 (D) For the individual to describe the subject in school he or she finds the easiest.

1.1 (E) For the individual to identify how physical, emotional and intellectual characteristics affect activities.

1.1 (F) For the individual to compare his or her intellectual skills when in first grade with current skills and describe how they have changed.

1.1 (G) For the individual to explain how people can express a given emotion differently (e.g., the ways to express anger, the ways to express joy).

1.1 (H) For the individual to identify those characteristics he or she and others agree the individual has, and those on which they do not agree; list reasons for differences of opinion.

1.1 (I) For the individual to give (two) reasons why people of the same age can differ in physical skills.

1.1 (J) For the individual to explain how out-of-school experiences can affect intellectual skill.

1.1 (K) For the individual to explain why a person's observable reaction in an emotional situation may differ from how he or she is feeling inside.

1.1 (L) For the individual to identify (two) behaviors (both verbal and nonverbal) that demonstrates each of the following emotions:

1.1 (M) For the individual to explain how physical handicaps can affect an individual's development of physical skills.

1.1 (N) For the individual to explain why one individual who works very hard might achieve academic success similar to that of another individual who does not work as hard.

1.1 (O) For the individual to compare and contrast the emotional reactions of:

1) children and youth, and
2) adult men and women.

1.1 (P) For the individual to list his or her physical, intellectual, and emotional characteristics that contribute to his or her uniqueness.

1.2 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO RECOGNIZE SIMILARITIES AND DIFFERENCES
BETWEEN HIS OR HER INTERESTS AND VALUES AND THOSE OF OTHERS.

Performance Indicators

7-9 (incl. K-6)

Performance Indicators

10-A (incl. K-9)

1.2 (A) For the individual to list (three) things he or she is interested in and (three) things he or she is not interested in.

1.2 (B) For the individual to give (three) examples of what he or she values.

1.2 (C) For the individual to compare his or her interests with those of someone his or her own age and sex; with someone a different age and sex.

1.2 (D) For the individual to compare his or her values that are important now with those that were important when he or she began school; discuss any changes.

1.2 (E) For the individual to discuss reasons why people have similar or different interests.

1.2 (F) For the individual to compare and contrast values held by his or her classmates.

1.2 (G) For the individual to give an example of how a person's values may be influenced by his or her background and experiences.

1.2 (H) For the individual to describe how his or her actions reflect a particular value (e.g., reading is fun--read a lot of books, talk about what you read, etc.).

1.2 (I) For the individual to describe (three) factors that may affect the values a person holds.

1.2 (J) Given several examples of people with differing interests, the individual can identify (three) reasons to account for the differences.

1.2 (K) For the individual to explain how his or her own opinions and attitudes can provide added knowledge about self.

1.3 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO RECOGNIZE SETTINGS AND EXPERIENCES
THAT PROVIDE KNOWLEDGE OF SELF AND OTHERS,

Performance Indicators

K-3

4-6 (incl. K-3)

7-9 (incl. K-6)

10-A (incl. K-9)

- 1.3 (A) For the individual to identify (five) experiences from which he or she gained knowledge about his or her physical, intellectual, emotional characteristics, interests and values.
- 1.3 (B) For the individual to identify (two) kinds of information he or she can obtain through self-exploration (e.g., interests, skills, values, personal satisfactions).

- 1.3 (C) For the individual to describe (three) situations in which an individual's activities (e.g., in class, at play, at work) provide information about his or her personal characteristics.

- 1.3 (D) Given an experience (e.g., running in a race), the individual can describe what he or she could learn about himself or herself from that experience.

- 1.3 (E) For the individual to describe the personal characteristics of a person playing a specific role which makes that person effective in that role.

- 1.3 (F) Given information on how well he or she does in various subjects in school, the individual can identify the subject in which the best work is done.

- 1.3 (G) For the individual to give a specific example of something he or she learned about a person from observing that person's activities.

- 1.3 (H) For the individual to describe how what he or she learns about himself or herself in the school setting is similar or different from knowledge about self learned at home, and explain the reasons for the similarities and differences.
- 1.3 (I) For the individual to explain why observation of activities may not always provide accurate information about a person's skills or interests (e.g., a person may not like an activity even if he spends a lot of time at it).

- 1.3 (J) For the individual to explain how another's opinion about his or her skills, interests, etc., provides information about himself or herself.

- 1.3 (K) For the individual to list (three) experiences that caused he or she to modify his or her values; explain the reasons for the need to change.
- 1.3 (L) Given an experience (e.g., a trip to a museum), the individual can describe the types of information about himself or herself that were gained from the experience.
- 1.3 (M) For the individual to explain why it is useful to check out opinions about oneself (e.g., to see if opinions are justified in the eyes of others, by actions, etc.).

2.1 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO RECOGNIZE THAT SELF DEVELOPMENT IS THE RESULT OF INTERACTION BETWEEN PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS (E.G., INTERESTS AND VALUES) AND HIS OR HER ENVIRONMENT.

K-3

Performance Indicators

4-6 (incl. K-3)

2.1 (A) For the individual to identify ways in which work he or she does at home and at school affects his physical, intellectual, and emotional characteristics.

2.1 (B) For the individual to identify abilities and skills he or she has in the process of learning that enable him or her to cope with the environment.

2.1 (C) For the individual to identify what he or she can do to make his environment more as he or she would like it to be.

2.1 (D) For the individual to identify (three) general kinds of experiences (e.g., visits to new places, school/classroom activities, training to specific skills, meeting new people, etc.) that may result in changes in particular individual characteristics.

2.1 (E) For the individual to describe how peer groups affect his interests and values and explain the importance of this affect.

2.1 (F) For the individual to describe how practice influences the development of skills or interests and give (two) examples.

2.1 (G) For the individual to compare current interests with those he or she had (two) years ago and identify specific experiences that might account for any changes.

7-9 (incl. K-6)

2.1 (E) For the individual to describe how peer groups affect his interests and values and explain the importance of this affect.

2.1 (F) For the individual to describe how practice influences the development of skills or interests and give (two) examples.

10-A (incl. K-9)

2.1 (G) For the individual to compare current interests with those he or she had (two) years ago and identify specific experiences that might account for any changes.

2.2 SUB GOAL FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO ESTABLISH GOALS TO DIRECT SELF DEVELOPMENT.

K-3	Performance Indicators	4-6 (incl. K-3)	7-9 (incl. K-6)	10-A (incl. K-9)
		2.2 (A) For the individual to give (two) examples of possible personal goals (e.g., to paint a picture, to learn how to skip rope, etc.) 2.2 (B) For the individual to explain how differences in each of the following might result in differences in personal goals; interests, abilities, values, experiences, peer and family influences. 2.2 (C) For the individual to describe how people's personal goals may change over time (e.g., become more specific, change to reflect a different value system, etc.).	2.2 (D) For the individual to compare and contrast personal goals with those of two other students. 2.2 (E) For the individual to identify (three) characteristics that can be developed through an individual's efforts (e.g., physical skills, academic skills, social skills). 2.2 (F) Given information on how well he or she does in specific subjects and on specific skills involved in those studies, the individual can identify those skills which he or she thinks will require further development.	2.2 (G) For the individual to analyze the nature of differences in personal goals between youth and adults. 2.2 (H) For the individual to list personal goals and describe how these goals will result in self development.

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO RECOGNIZE THAT CHANGE IN SELF CONCEPT CAN BE THE RESULT OF LEARNING, PHYSICAL GROWTH, AND/OR MATURATION.

K-3

Performance Indicators

4-6 (incl. K-3)

7-9 (incl. K-6)

10-A (incl. K-9)

2.3 (A) For the individual to give (four) examples of how his or her physical abilities have changed over time.

2.3 (B) For the individual to explain how development of physical and intellectual abilities can affect interests and attitudes.

2.3 (C) For the individual to explain how each of the following contributes to a person's concept of who he or she is: things one likes about oneself; things one doesn't like about oneself; things one thinks they can accomplish; things one thinks they cannot accomplish.

2.3 (D) For the individual to explain how doing something new successfully increases his or her self-confidence.

2.3 (E) Given a specific physical or intellectual skill to be developed, the individual can describe how a person might develop that skill.

2.3 (F) For the individual to explain how the attitudes of others can affect a person's concept of himself or herself.

2.3 (G) For the individual to describe how knowing what he or she can and can't do well affects attitudes and behavior.

- 2.3 (H) For the individual to describe (two) factors which influence the development of intellectual skills.
- 2.3 (I) For the individual to give (two) reasons why some people may work harder than others to change or develop specific physical, intellectual, or emotional characteristics.
- 2.3 (J) For the individual to explain how feedback about his or her characteristics influences his or her self concept.
- 2.3 (K) For the individual to assess the relative influences of growth, experience, and conscious action on the development of a specific ability.
- 2.3 (L) For the individual to predict the effect a particular learning experience will have on his or her self concept.
- 2.3 (M) For the individual to assess relative importance of what he or she knows about their physical characteristics, interests, abilities, and values in forming his or her self concept.

3.1 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO UNDERSTAND THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN INDIVIDUAL AND GROUP ROLES.

K-3

Performance Indicators

4-6 (incl. K-3)

10-A (incl. K-9)

- 3.1 (A) For the individual to identify (three) activities in which he or she works alone and (three) activities in which he or she is a member of a group.
- 3.1 (B) For the individual to describe activities he or she likes to do alone and those activities he or she likes to do with a group.

- 3.1 (C) For the individual to explain how a person can respect someone's thinking even though they disagree with it.
- 3.1 (D) For the individual to describe (two) areas for which a student can accept responsibility for his or her individual goals (e.g., school work, home tasks, etc.).

- 3.1 (E) For the individual to identify (three) different settings in which one's actions often have consequences for others and discuss those consequences.
- 3.1 (F) For the individual to identify how completion of a group task depends on cooperation as well as individual proficiency.

- 3.1 (G) For the individual to list group goals in a given situation and identify reasons why he or she may have to compromise individual goals in order to reach the group goals.
- 3.1 (H) For the individual to explain how the amount of responsibility a person accepts may vary.

- 3.1 (I) For the individual to identify manipulative abilities he or she has in working with others.
- 3.1 (J) For the individual to compare the rights of the individual to the rights of the group.

- 3.1 (K) For the individual to explain why a "double standard" is an infringement of an individual's or group's rights.
- 3.1 (L) For the individual to describe his or her behavior in a group situation; he or she will differentiate between his or her behavior and that of others; he or she will analyze why they did or did not do more than the minimum required.

3.2 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO RECOGNIZE BOTH THE INDIVIDUAL AND GROUP ASPECTS OF LIFE-CAREER ROLES.

K-3

Performance Indicators

4-6 (incl. K-3)

3.2 (A) In terms of the following roles, the individual can list activities he or she does alone and those they do with others (as a worker, as a player, as a citizen, as a family member).

3.2 (B) Given (four) different work situations, the individual can describe how his or her performance affects the performance of the group (e.g., at home with the family, at work with Boy or Girl Scouts, at school with classmates, etc.).

3.2 (E) For the individual to identify (four) roles (a family role, an occupational role, a citizen role, and a leisure role) that he or she is interested in and can compare and contrast the individual and group aspects of each of the identified roles.

7-9 (incl. K-6)

3.2 (C) Given (four) occupations the individual is interested in, he or she can identify both the individual and group aspects of each of the (four) occupations.

3.2 (D) Given a leisure, a family, and a citizen role the individual is participating in, he or she can identify the individual and group aspects of each of those roles.

10-A (incl. K-9)

3.2 (E) For the individual to identify (four) roles (a family role, an occupational role, a citizen role, and a leisure role) that he or she is interested in and can compare and contrast the individual and group aspects of each of the identified roles.

3.3 SUB GOAL FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO UNDERSTAND THE EFFECT OF ROLE EXPECTATION ON INDIVIDUAL BEHAVIOR,

K-3

Performance Indicators

4-6 (incl. K-3)

3.3 (A) For the individual to identify ways in which he or she is dependent on the work of others (at home and in school).

3.3 (B) For the individual to identify ways in which others depend on work he or she does.

3.3 (C) For the individual to describe advantages and disadvantages of depending on others and being depended on.

3.3 (D) For the individual to describe a situation in which his or her expectations differed from those of another person.

3.3 (E) Given a conflict between the individual's behavior and expectations of relatives or friends, the individual can explain (two) ways the conflict might be resolved.

3.3 (F) For the individual to explain why certain people feel they have a responsibility to influence him or her regarding what kind of life they live.

3.3 (G) Given a situation where the individual's desired life style differs from someone's expected life style for that individual, he or she can describe how the conflict might be resolved.

7-9 (incl. K-6)

3.3 (D) For the individual to describe a situation in which his or her expectations differed from those of another person.

- 14.3 (H) For the individual to identify family, citizen, and leisure goals he or she has achieved and discuss the relationship between these successes.
- 14.3 (I) For the individual to predict family, citizen, and leisure goals he or she may be involved with in (two) years.

15.1 SUB GOAL FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO IDENTIFY AND UTILIZE RESOURCES NECESSARY IN THE IMPLEMENTATION OF HIS OR HER CAREER PLANS.

Performance Indicators

K-3

4-6 (incl. K-3)

7-9 (incl. K-6)

10-A (incl. K-9)

15.1 (A) Given a goal the individual has identified (e.g., to go fishing with a friend or family member), he or she can identify the resources necessary to implement that goal.

15.1 (B) Given a goal the individual has identified, he or she can compare and contrast the possible resources for implementing that goal, and then identify those most accessible.

15.1 (C) For a given immediate educational goal (e.g., learning to speak Spanish), the individual can list the specific resources needed to attain the goal.

15.1 (D) For the individual to choose an educational or training goal and list the resources available to aid he or she in the implementation of that goal.

15.1 (E) For the individual to select a specific occupation, leisure, family, or citizen goal, and list the specific resources needed to attain that goal.

15.1 (F) Given a description of how a person attained a specific educational, occupational, leisure, family, or citizen goal, the individual can identify where he or she obtained the necessary resources.

15.1 (G) Given a list of suggested resources for attaining an educational, occupational, family, citizen, or leisure goal, the individual can identify the ones most likely to be available.

15.2 SUB GOAL
FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO DEMONSTRATE A COMMITMENT TO AND ACT
UPON HIS OR HER PLANS.

Performance Indicators

K-3

4-6 (incl. K-3)

7-9 (incl. K-6)

10-A (incl. K-9)

15.2 (A) Given a plan to reach a particular career goal (leisure, occupational, citizen, or family), the individual can list the steps to reach the goal and implement the first step in the plan.

15.2 (B) Given a plan to reach a goal, that individual can list the steps involved, make a timeline, and after implementing the first step, can evaluate his or her progress and make any necessary changes in the plan.

15.2 (C) Given a plan to reach (two) career goals (leisure, family, citizen, occupational), the individual can list the steps involved, make a timeline, and after implementing the plan, he or she can evaluate whether or not the timeline was realistic.

15.2 (D) Given an individual's plan, that individual can determine the timeline for implementation, gather the resources necessary for implementation, and can demonstrate a commitment to the plan by initiating the plan and providing for evaluation (on-going and final).

16.1 SUB GOAL
FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO IDENTIFY FACTORS THAT INFLUENCE
IMPLEMENTATION PROGRESS.

K-3

Performance Indicators

4-6 (incl. K-3)

7-9 (incl. K-6)

10-A (incl. K-9)

16.1 (A) After an individual has succeeded in achieving a personal goal, he or she will identify the factors that led to success.

16.1 (B) Given a goal the individual has identified, he or she will identify (two) factors that may help achieve that goal and (two) factors that may hinder achievement of the goal.

16.1 (C) Given a goal the individual has identified, he or she can predict which factors enhance success and which factors might lead to failure.

16.1 (D) For the individual to identify (three) factors to consider in determining priorities among goals or priorities of steps within a goal (e.g., amount of time required, need for prerequisites, availability of resources, need for immediate attainment, etc.).

16.1 (E) Given a number of goals that a person wants to attain, and a list of activities which would help to attain each of the goals, the individual can rank the various goals in terms of their priority for attention.

16.2 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO PERIODICALLY ASSESS PROGRESS ON HIS OR HER CAREER PLAN.

K-3

4-6 (incl. K-3)

7-9 (incl. K-6)

10-A (incl. K-9)

Performance Indicators

16.2 (A) Given a goal the individual is pursuing, he or she will discuss how close they are to achieving that goal.

16.2 (B) Given a list of steps the individual identified for achieving a goal, he or she can identify which step they are at and predict how long it will take to achieve the goal.

16.2 (F) For the individual to identify (two) different ways to monitor a person's progress in attaining a goal or in completing activities required to attain a goal.

16.2 (G) For the individual to explain how each of the following can help a person monitor his or her progress in accomplishing designated tasks: checkpoints, incentives, contingency plans.

16.2 (H) For the individual to describe (two) kinds of rewards, (e.g., intrinsic or extrinsic) that can be used to help a person maintain progress in attaining a specific goal.

16.2 (C) Given a plan for allocating effort to various tasks required to attain a specific short term goal (e.g., completing a school assignment), the individual can follow the schedule and assess its efficiency in helping attain the goal.

16.2 (D) Given a specific plan for the pursuit of a specific short term goal, the individual can establish a series of checkpoints in the plan.

16.2 (E) Given a specific strategy for pursuing and attaining a goal, the individual can assess progress at a specific point and compare it with the progress anticipated in the schedule.

17.1 SUB GOAL

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TO MODIFY OR REDESIGN CAREER PLANS, IF EVALUATION INDICATES.

K-3
4-6 (incl. K-3)
7-9 (incl. K-6)
10-A (incl. K-9)

Performance Indicators

17.1 (A) For the individual to list some possible reasons for changing plans.

17.1 (B) Given an individual's plan for achieving a goal, he or she can list (three) possible reasons the plan may have to be changed.

17.1 (C) Given a situation in which a person did not progress toward a goal as fast as anticipated, the individual can describe how he or she could have adjusted activities in order to make greater progress.

17.1 (D) Given a situation in which a person is not progressing as fast as he or she expected toward attaining a goal, the individual can analyze the events and determine the reasons for the lack of progress.

17.1 (E) Given a situation in which a person is attaining a goal faster than he or she anticipated, the individual can analyze the situation and determine the reasons for the unexpectedly fast progress.

17.1 (F) For the individual to identify (two) different ways a person could channel his or her energy upon attaining a goal.

Performance Indicators: Behavioral Domains

In addition to developing performance indicators which encompass a developmental learning sequence, an attempt is being made to assure adequate representation from the affective as well as the cognitive behavioral domains.

The cognitive domain includes recognition and recall of knowledge and the development of intellectual skills and abilities. The affective domain deals with attitudes, interests, values, the acquisition of appreciations and adequate adjustment.

In the cognitive domain, the six basic subcategories of Bloom, et al., have been used. They are: knowledge, comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis, and evaluation.

Classifications for the affective domain are in accordance with Krathwohl's taxonomy. Krathwohl, et al. (1964) specifies five levels of affective skills: receiving, responding valuing, organization, and characterization by value complex.

In formulating the performance indicators, terms such as "list", "identify", and "describe" were used to establish measurable student performance. Although they may appear cognitive, an analysis of the specific skills required of the individual will indicate affective as well as cognitive performance indicators.
